The purpose of the Hospice Help Network is to provide education and emotional support to individuals and families exploring end-of-life issues.

Issues may include, but are not limited to the following: the importance of having advance directives, determining a long-term plan of care, exploring a person's end-of-life wishes, and exploring available community resources such as support groups, long term care facilities, and in-home caregiving supports including death doula, palliative care and hospice services.

Support to individuals and families may include, but is not limited to the following:

- Education: hospice guidelines and qualification criteria, services commonly offered by hospice providers, the difference between levels of institutional care, guidelines for Medicaid application procedures, different types of advance directives, and supportive services available in the community.
- Emotional support: issues surrounding anticipatory grief, the dying process, legacy projects, family dynamics, caregiver stress, denial, loss of independence and purpose, adjustment to having a terminal condition, coping with a terminal condition, management of disease progress, long-term care planning, and deciding whether or not to pursue hospice or palliative care.
- Referrals: to local hospice and palliative care programs, death doula, elder law offices, funeral homes, in-home caregiving agencies, financial advisors, and local supportive community services that assist with elder care, disability, financial assistance, or any other support relevant to client needs.

Support to communities may include, but is not limited to the following:

- Professional social media presence to raise awareness and provide education on the topics mentioned above
- Public educational seminars, lectures, and webinars offered at local community institutions like libraries, churches, support groups, communities, long-term care facilities, hospitals, coffee shops, etc.
